URBAN PROGRAM

25X1C10b

25X1C10b 1. In view of the fact that the [REDACTED] repatriates were scattered among a large number of Soviet cities, need for directing [REDACTED] toward the cities with the highest priorities and the greatest gaps in intelligence.

2. Provision of on-the-spot guidance in map evaluation and in expediting the procurement from headquarters of the best base maps upon which the information could be plotted. Important because

3. Provision of guidance on the need for increased elicitation of street names, which is proving to be [REDACTED] in present urban plan program.

25X1B1a

4. Briefing on the characteristics of Soviet house numbering systems, data on which appears to be neglected in the current interrogations. (Valuable information on the house numbering system of key cities could have been obtained from many of the sources with little or no additional expenditure of time.)

5. Elicitation of neglected information on the dynamic aspects of urban development. (Drastic changes in the city pattern resulting from the reconstruction of wartime damage or from the postwar construction efforts.)
